Mary Mullin is an Hon. Fellow of the RCA, the University of the Arts in Bournemouth, the International Society of Typographic Design, and Honorary Life Fellow of the RSA. In 2017 she was awarded the RSA Bi-Centenary Medal “for encouraging and promoting design across education and industry”. In 2018, with Sir Christopher Frayling, she co-edited ‘Fitness For What Purpose’, a book documenting the 40 year history of the Sir Misha Black Awards.

The Sir Misha Black Awards Committee, in honouring Mary Mullin, recognises her thirty years of dedication to the Awards Committee, promoting and endorsing on an International stage the principles initially championed by Sir Misha Black in his work, over 40 years ago, at both the Royal College of Art and Imperial College London.

Malcolm Garrett, Chairman of the Sir Misha Black Awards Committee, commented: “There are barely enough words that I, on behalf of the Awards Committee, can summon to express the immense gratitude for the leadership and vision Mary has shown over 30 years of dedicated service to the Sir Misha Black Awards.”

Mary Mullin has commented: “To have had the privilege of calling some of the most distinguished design educators in this country ‘my colleagues’, representing as they do, the Royal Commission, dedicated to promoting design and engineering excellence for over 170 years, plus the leading Royal Design and Engineering Institutions in the UK, has been an education and reward in itself. To be awarded the Misha Black Medal and thus to be linked to educators from around the globe, recognised for doing extraordinary and innovative work, is indeed a special honour for which I am deeply and truly appreciative.”

Mary V Mullin will receive the Honorary Medal at a Ceremony to be held at Imperial College London, at 6pm on Thursday, 21 November 2024.

The Sir Misha Black Medal for Distinguished Services to Design Education and the Award for Innovation in Design Education will also be presented at the ceremony.

for Distinguished Services to Design Education

BACKGROUND NOTE FOR EDITORS

Set up to commemorate the legacy of Sir Misha Black, the The Sir Misha Black Medal for Distinguished Services to Design Education is awarded to individuals across the globe who have made a significant contribution to design education. First awarded in 1978, the Medal began life as a biennial event but has since become an annual date within the design world calendar.

In 2020, the Sir Misha Black Awards Committee came under the wing of the Royal Commission for the Exhibition of 1851. The inclusion of the Sir Misha Black Awards in the Royal Commission's portfolio, effective from February 2020, reinforces the Commission's mission to "increase the means of industrial education and extend the influence of science and art upon productive industry".

Sir Misha Black

Sir Misha Black was an industrial designer who with his partner Milner Gray, founded DRU (Design Research Unit) in the late 1940s. It became one of the first international, interdisciplinary design practices with major clients in industrial design, architecture and graphics. In 1959 Misha Black was appointed the first Professor of Industrial Design at the Royal College of Art, a post he held until his retirement in 1975. He was the most influential design teacher of his time, involved in international design affairs as well as being a gifted speaker and writer on design matters.
